Round Three: Christmas Customs

We're going to tell you about ten Christmas customs from all around the world. Are they true or have we made them up? Just answer TRUE or FALSE.

Ten slides with one Christmas Custom on each.

Decorative blue scribbles in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom One:

In Venezuela there is a custom that people roller skate to church on Christmas morning.

It is thought that this is because it is hot in Venezuela and it doesn't snow so they roller skate instead of sledging to church.

TRUE or FALSE?

Blue scribbles in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Two:

In Iceland there is a custom called the Jolabokaflod, people give each other books on Christmas eve and sit around reading them

TRUE or FALSE?

A decorative blue swirl or scribble is located in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Three:

In Japan it has become traditional to eat KFC for Christmas Dinner. The servers dress up in Santa outfits and the fried chicken comes in specially decorated packaging.

TRUE or FALSE?

A blue decorative swirl or scribble is located in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Four:

In Brazil many people like to celebrate Christmas by playing water polo while dressed as Mary, Joseph, the Shepherds and the Wise Men or as Santa and his elves. This has become so popular that on Christmas day the national TV stations all show Christmas themed water polo matches featuring popular celebrities.

TRUE or FALSE?

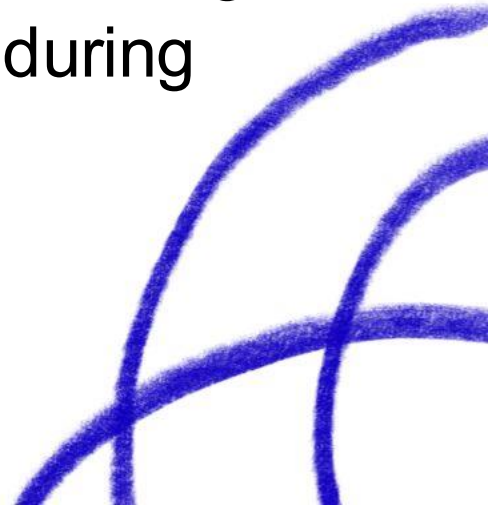

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Five:

In the Seychelles, where it is always sunny and hot at Christmas, the army turn their largest aircraft hanger into a winter wonderland and create an enormous bank of snow so that all the local schools can come and try sledging and skiing. On Christmas Eve there is a special church service with carol singing, mulled wine and chestnuts roasting. This tradition was started by homesick American servicemen during the Second World War.

TRUE or FALSE?

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Six:

Norwegians believe that Christmas Eve coincides with the arrival of evil spirits and witches. It is only logical then, that Norwegian householders hide all their brooms before they go to sleep.

After all, nothing spoils Christmas quicker than finding your broom in broken pieces at the foot of a tree, trashed by some joy-riding witch.

TRUE or FALSE?

Blue scribbles in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Seven:

In Catalonia, a region of Spain, the local people create a character out of a log, drawing a face on it and giving it a hat. Then they spend a fortnight 'feeding' it fruit, nuts and sweets.

On Christmas Eve, the entire family beats the log with sticks and sings a traditional song that translates to 'if you don't poop well, I'll beat you with a stick' until the log 'poops out' all the treats that the family have been feeding it.

TRUE or FALSE?

Blue scribbles in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Eight:

In some parts of Russia, children are in charge on Christmas Day and the grown ups have to do what they say.

Usually the children make the grown ups play silly games or sing funny songs but sometimes things turn nasty and the children make the grown ups set fire to the furniture or play dangerous tricks on each other. Every year there are some serious injuries and even fatalities associated with this tradition. Regional authorities have run campaigns to stop this tradition but some people carry on.

TRUE or FALSE?

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Nine:

In Austria, St Nicholas has an evil counterpart called Krampus. He is the bad cop to St Nick's good cop, a demon-like creature with one task: to punish bad children before Christmas.

Men dressed in devil costumes roam the streets, carrying chains and a basket for abducting especially bad children and hauling them to hell.

TRUE or FALSE?

Round Three: Christmas Customs

Custom Ten:

In Namibia, Christmas is called 'The Secret Festival', it is not mentioned on the television, on the radio or in schools. Families pretend that nothing special is happening, not even speaking about the festival to friends or neighbours.

On Christmas Day every family decorates their home, gives gifts and shares a special meal together – there are even special songs about 'The Secret Festival' but if you were a visitor to the country you would probably never know it was happening at all.

It is thought this tradition derives from a time when Christianity was persecuted throughout parts of Southern Africa and it was necessary to practice the religion in secret.
